The Crane Pit

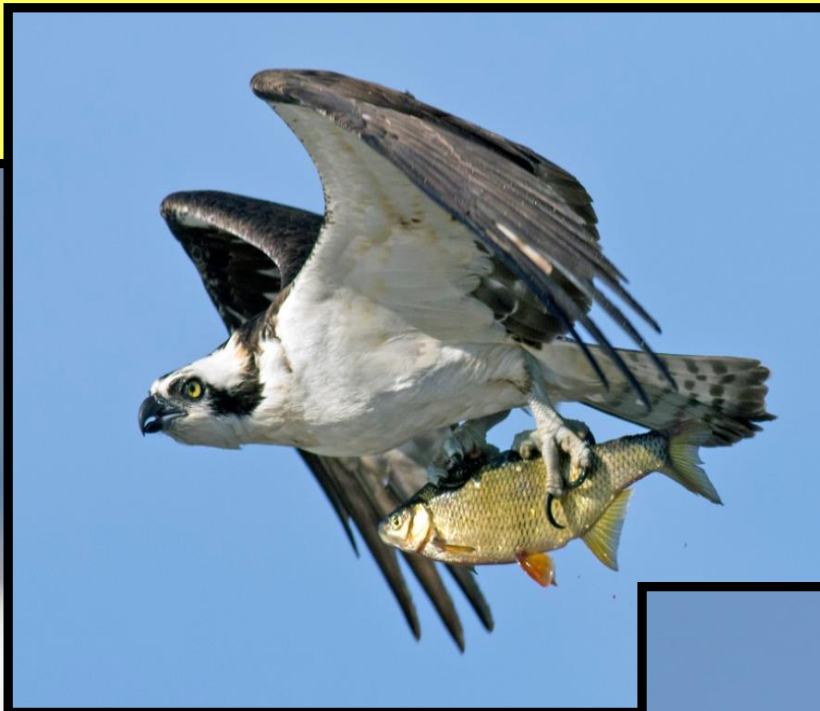

I chose a hummingbird because it's a colorful and beautiful bird. There's a flower next to it in the front part so I sometimes see them by the tree, so you could say it's just a nice surprise. I have always seen hummingbirds as a calm and carefree bird. In my work I make the hummingbird unaware of its background and surroundings. I just think that the goal is complicated but I'm getting better at it, so I'm making progress. I chose a shaded style with no blending but with value. It's a cool style and with less shading it makes you think, I wouldn't change a thing. Though, it turned out great and I'm proud of the end result. I hope the viewer can see that the hummingbird is calm and carefree. Lots of people are constantly stressed or anxious so it's nice to show yourself as a hummingbird away from it all.

I chose the Blue Heron because I see them all the time in Annapolis during the spring and summer time. I think that the personality sticks out with the shading and the body shape. I loved working on the plumes, they are so easy to work on and the time lapse was so cool to watch. I would have maybe changed the feathers on the bird but I loved the finished piece and I am so proud of it.

I chose the Creative Handmade Business Challenge because I thought it would be a fun challenge to take because of the specific materials and steps involved in hand-making something. The Creative Handmade Business Challenge was a great idea for making my own little business and being able to create something that I can be proud of. I also enjoyed the challenge because it was a fun way to learn about business and how to start a business. I hope to start my own business one day and I hope to be a successful entrepreneur.

I chose the turkey vulture because, even though some people find this weird, my favorite bird is a turkey vulture. I find them to be very interesting and helpful creatures. They are helpful because they eat dead and decaying animals. Without them, towns and cities would be full of dead animals. I showed my artistic style by making the bird slightly cartoony. I thought using the iPad was very fun. I really liked Procreate and I wish it was available on Android devices. If I could change anything, I would change the stamp border because it is a little wonky. I really like my finished work. I hope that seeing this artwork will make people appreciate turkey vultures more.
