A. Update from the Mayor

Mayor Gavin Buckley City Council Remarks 7 p.m. - March 14, 2022

Good evening!

I want to acknowledge our Annapolis City Attorney Mike Lyles who will be recognized by his alma mater, Columbus Law School at Catholic University with a Diversity Leadership Alumni Award later this week. Mike was nominated for this award by the Black Law Students Association. That has to be a great honor, to know that the next generation of lawyers admires your work. Congratulations!

Annapolis Recreation and Parks is hosting a few events:

- Annapolis Hoopbus Tour on Friday, March 18, has two free youth clinics, at Eastport at 3P and Robinwood at 4:30 with White Chocolate (Randy Gill) , leading up to a Hoopbus versus N.A.M Charity Game at Pip Moyer at 6P. Hoop Bus was started in Venice Beach California to use mobile basketball workshops as a social engagement platform.

- On March 26, they host the giveaway for Pass, Pick and Play. This is a great opportunity for those of you who have youth sports superstars in the making to get some gently pre-loved sporting equipment that has been donated by the community. Many of these items are like new.
- On April 2, Rec and Parks will be hosting a Community Forum to get input from the public about the kinds of recreation, park and programming people are interested in. A lot of good ideas bubble up from crowd sourcing and I hope they get a good response and get some great new ideas.
- On April 9, they've got the Adult Easter Egg Hunt at Night. Bring your basket and a flashlight. It's $10 presale or $15 at the event. The eggs are filled with prizes and its a fun springtime favorite activity that is returning to Annapolis.

Speaking of favorite activities returning to Annapolis, we had a tremendous turnout for the Annapolis St. Patrick's Parade and Shamrock the Dock. There was apparently a lot of pent up demand for this activity to return to our City and we could tell that by the volume of people in the streets on Sunday March 6. I thank our public safety team for managing the crowds and keeping people safe and I thank the organizers for their work in running a smooth event and for the cleanup afterwards.

Speaking of Parades, the Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. Parade and African Diaspora will take place on April 2. The Hillman garage may be closed at that point, so I urge anyone hoping to attend or participate in the parade to have a plan for parking. Visit www.accessannapolis.com for information.

In fact, we have a parade at least once a month from now to Independence Day - May 30 is the Memorial Day parade, June 4 is Annapolis Pride. June 18 is Juneteenth and of course the Fourth of July.

Later this month we also have Maryland Day festivities around the City and county. Check out MarylandDay.org to learn more.

==

We are also welcoming back the Annapolis film festival March 31 to April 3. I've seen the banners hanging in downtown and I look forward to the curated films that the organizers have selected for us. They have 70 films over four days. This is the 10th year and tickets are now on sale.

This Saturday is the grand opening of Historic Annapolis' newest exhibit at 99 Main Street. "Annapolis: An American Story," is a unique partnership with other significant heritage sites and museums around the City and is an attempt to tell a wider and broader history of Annapolis. It is a collaboration to include more voices and to make our history more approachable.

Partners include Annapolis Maritime Museum, Banneker Douglass, St. John's College, the Naval Academy, Maryland State House gallery and the Historic Annapolis sites in downtown.

We are a city with amazing stories to tell and this exhibit opens the door on a board array of storytelling narratives. Check it out!

Speaking of partnership with HA, I was very excited to accept the transfer of the Burtis House on Prince George Street from the State of Maryland, Department of Natural Resources on March 8. I thank the members of the council who attended our signing ceremony, Alderwoman Tierney, Alderwoman O'Neill and Alderwoman Finlayson, as well as City officials and dignitaries from the State of Maryland.

Burtis House and the docks in front are the keystone parcel in our plans to reimagine City Dock. It is also the last remaining residential parcel of the working waterfront in downtown that was known as Hell Point. Working with National Park Service - Chesapeake, Preservation Maryland and Historic Annapolis, they will soon endeavor on a rehabilitation and elevation of the structure.

I look forward to what we will do with this space, how we tie it into the programmable space we are planning for City Dock and how we utilize the additional dock space and waterfront. I thank David Jarrell and Ashley Leonard for their work on the negotiations to get the building surplussed.

As I said at the event, it is a small house, but for the City of Annapolis, it is huge!

Finally, we will be back in Chambers for City Council meetings on April 11. I know we all look forward to seeing our residents in person again.

Let's carry on with our meeting...
